Good morning,

This morning we announced that we have secured two new agreements in Maine to develop, build, and finance community solar projects in Maine. We value the projects at US$21.5 million, further adding to our project backlog (which stood at $US83.3 million at the close of Q2).

The two projects total 11.8MW in combined solar capacity, with one in each of the two Maine utility service territories. One of the projects will be located on a contaminated industrial site, representing a green and sustainable use for the otherwise undesirable property. We are developing the two sites as community solar projects, which was made possible by recent policy changes in the state, providing residential, commercial, and industrial energy users the opportunity to subscribe to projects for savings on their energy costs.

Further details on the projects can be found in this morning's press release.
